It seems they've become more common over the years Best sighting was on the way to the Oregon Coast I nearly got an incredible photo of a bird in a steamy pond, but it flew off just as I was snapping the shutter! I did get som decent photos later at Tule Lake, California. My most memorable sighting was in the everglades in winter, a whole flock of these came skimming a few feet above the water in a wing-tip to wing-tip formation - a long chain of pelicans that consisted of hundreds of birds. When they reached our cance, th chain parted slightly then re-formed ahead of us. I've seen these many times, up and down the west US coast. Sitting on a post I was hiking along, looked up, and said, dang there's a frigatebird. Mostly flying around Saw plenty of these flying to and fro not sure I got a good photo though, I need to go through all my cormorant photos, but none of them are really good from this day. Northern Harrier	Circus hudsonius	Y	Nov 2001	New Mexico	I've probably seen these before 2001, but I saw a couple skirting the ground along arroyos in southwest NM.
Bald Eagle					My favorite sighting had to be along the I-5 bridge in Seattle. One was hovering in the
Roadside Hawk	O manufacture and the state		E-1	One Berlinsula, Oneta Blan	Who named this bird? It's a silly name, but on the other hand, I saw a few of them and they were all along the side of a road.
					It was sitting on a highway sign along hwy 26. This is pretty much at the edge of their range, but the red shoulders were unmistakable.
Red-shouldered Hawk Red-tailed Hawk	Buteo lineatus Buteo jamaicensis	Y	May 2013 1970s	Hillsboro, OR Chicago Area	Very common
Francisco Hand			A		soaring overhead distinctive white underside. Got a crummy photo, but not linked
Ferruginous Hawk Northern Crested Caracara	Buteo regalis Caracara cheriway	Y	August 2011 February 2013	Goat Rocks, WA Osa Peninsula, Costa Rica	here Saw a number of them along the road north of Puerto Jimenez
Yellow-headed Caracara	Milvago chimachima	Y	February 2013	Osa Peninsula, Costa Rica	A common raptor along Carate Beach, and into corcovado national park.
American Kestrel	Falco sparverius	Y	1970s	Chicago Area	Coming soon to a fence-post near you Way up in the mountains could have been prarie falcon, but I don't thinks so. Saw
Merlin	Falco columbarius	Y	Sept 2001	Colorado, CDT	many falcons flying around
Prairie Falcon Peregrine Falcon	Falco mexicanus	Y	4-May-14	Cottonwood Canyon - John Day River, OR	One had a nest high on a cliffor at least a perch there. Have a very grainy photo I've probably seen these from a distance before, but they're difficult to identify way up in
	Falco peregrinus	v	Nov 2003	Heceta Head, Oregon Coast	the air. I finally was able to confirm this sighting thanks to a pair of birders who had their spotting scope trained on the bird. I was right at the lighthouse, and the bird was perched on top of a rock formation about 100 yards to the north. This isn't the best photo, but it was a long way away! I've added a link to another photo of a captive bird I swa at the Seattle (Woodland Park) Zoo.
Virginia Rail	Rallus limicola	Ŷ	30-Jun-12	Jackson Bottom, Oregon	Poking around in the grasses - I have a couple very blurry photos
Grey-necked Wood Rail	Aramides cajaneus	Y	February 2013	Cahuita, Costa Rica	These are really loud birds, making an incredible ruckus in the pre-dawn hours near Cahuita. They stayed well-hidden for the most part, but one of them ran across the road just for a second in the dim light.
White-breasted Waterhen	Amaurornis phoenicurus	Y	4-Jun-13	Singapore	These are fairly common in the Singapore Botanical garden and in a few other places in the country.
Sora	Porzana carolina	Y	1-Jul-12	Ridgefield National Wildlife Refuge, WA	going in and out of the grasses below a bird blind/structure
American Coot Black Oystercatcher	Fulica americana Haematopus bachmani	Y	1970s 1990s	Chicago area Marin County, CA	very common like water rats First seen near Pt. Reyes photos from many places along the Pacific Coast
Black-necked Stilt	Himantopus mexicanus	Y	2001	Orange County, CA	In a sea-shore wetland
American Avocet	Recurvirostra americana	Y	19-May-12 November 2007	Tule Lake, California	I've seen them previously, but hadn't recorded it.
Pacific Golden Plover Semipalmated Plover	Pluvialis fulva Charadrius semipalmatus	Y Y	November 2007 February 2013	Kauai Cahuita, Costa Rica	Winter plumage of course.
Killdeer	Charadrius vociferus	Y	1970s	Chicago area	I know I've seen other similar species as well, but need to confirm those
Common Snipe	Gallinago gallinago	Y	June 2006 1-Jul-12	Iceland Ridgefield National Wildlife Refuge, WA	These were pretty common in wetland areas. The noise they make with their tails is really other-worldly wo-wo-wo-wo-wo- They were flying all over the place, but finally got a photo of one on the ground not a
Wilson's Snipe	Gallinago delicata	Y	. 001-12		great photo, but sufficient to ID the bird.
Long-billed Dowitcher	Limnodromus scolopaceus	Y	October 2012	Fern Hill, Forest Grove, Oregon	3 of these were probing through the mud for over an hour at the same location. I guess they had nothing better to do.
		ľ			A pair of these flew by our boat A guide made a quick ID, but I did manage to get a

Greater renowiegs	Tringa melanoleuca	1	8-Sep-12	Finley National Wildlife Reruge, Corvains Oregon.	While this bird shouldn't be here at this time of year, I got a decent (though not good Lesser Yellowlegs	Tringa flavipes	Y		Jackson Bottom, Oregon	enough to post) photo, and can't figure out what else it could be. The yellow legs narrow it down quite a bit, and the bill size is what made me confident of what this is.
Spotted Sandpiper	Actitis macularius	Y	June 2009	Todd Lake, Oregon Cascades	I definately remember seeing this one because it was unexpected and easy to identify.
Ruddy Turnstone	Arenaria interpres	Y	Not sure	not sure	Might have been in the Chicago area during migration.

First good photo was in Mosier Oregon birds turn up in the most unlikely places sometimes. Right in the middle of the eclipse - can you believe it? Didn't this used to be a rufous-sided towhee? Saw a number of these in open areas around Carate Beach. These are pretty common, and very visible. Fairty common on Kauai O

Snow Bunting		1			Saw this one pecking on a gravel road near the summit of Marys Peak. It was a bit more drab than "the book", but that's fairly common. I think this is a female with winter
